The Token Sale is Dead; Long Live the Pre-Sale

Pipe-dreaming entrepreneurs getting funded way too fast mixed in with a new class of novice investors driven by out-sized returns drove the ICO market to a $12 billion market frenzy in the 2017-18 bubble (much like the dotcoms of the late 1990s). Today, the ICO market is presumed to be dead, as is the IEO (effectively, ICOs run by exchanges) market. And the growing morass of confusing, contradictory regulations by the US and several other large nations seems to have killed off all hope of a token-driven economy.
